Coronavirus: Indian greeting ‘Namaste’ goes global

In an effort to stop the spread of the coronavirus, more people, including global leaders, are using the Indian greeting of Namaste. Indian Prime Minister, Shri Narendra Modi has promoted the ‘Namaste’, saying that the world is increasingly adopting the no-contact way of greeting.

People around the world are worried that shaking hands, hugging and kissing on the cheek might help spread the virus. In recent days, images of US President, Mr. Donald Trump and Prince Charles opting to use the Indian greeting over a handshake have gone viral.

Namaste has gone viral yet again, with French President, Mr. Emmanuel Macron having greeted German Chancellor, Ms. Angela Merkel with the Indian greeting to avoid shaking hands, which is the usual protocol. A growing number of influential people are adopting this method of exchanging pleasantries amidst the COVID-19 crisis that has gripped the world. ‘Social distancing’ is the buzz word right now and the two European leaders were seen practicing it when they met on Thursday to discuss travel restrictions related to the coronavirus. This is not the first time that Emmanuel Macron adopted the ‘Namaste’ greeting though. He had done the same while meeting Spain’s King Felipe and Queen Letizia at the Elysee Palace in Paris in early March.
