Forests are our Lungs, it regulates Climate, Buffer Disasters & support the Marginalized: VP

New Delhi, May 5 (PIB)

The Vice-President of India, Shri Jagdeep Dhankhar, today said, "Forests are extremely important. Forests are our lungs. If a country's forests are in good shape, its people will enjoy good health-because forests are the lungs. Agriculture is our lifeline. But we need forests as they regulate climate, they buffer disasters, and they support livelihoods-especially for the poor and marginalized."

the Vice-President said, "Today, no institution can function as a standalone entity. There was a time when medical education, engineering education, management education, environmental education, and forest education all existed in silos. But now, everything has become interdisciplinary. And therefore, we must adopt an inclusive approach to learning."

Interacting with faculty members and students of the College of Forestry, Sirsi, during a special programme on the "Role of Forestry in Nation Building", today, Shri Dhankhar emphasized that, "We must pledge to protect our forests and contribute in every way possible, because climate change is a global challenge-a global menace. The situation is alarmingly hanging, and we have no other planet to live on apart from Mother Earth," he warned. Highlighting India's civilizational wisdom, the Vice-President said, "This land is a confluence of spirituality and sustainability. Sustainability is not just vital for the economy-it is vital for healthy living. Our Vedic culture has pre-achieved sustainability for thousands of years. And today, there is no alternative to sustainable development. We cannot engage in reckless exploitation of natural resources. We must restrict ourselves to what is minimally required. We all need to be aware of this." Calling for deeper ecological consciousness, he remarked, "We must develop a sense of self-realisation-that Mother Earth, this environment, the forests, the ecosystems, the flora and fauna-we are their trustees, not consumers. We are duty-bound to pass this on to future generations." "Environment is that aspect of life which touches every living being on Earth. When the environment is challenged, the challenge is not just to humanity-it affects everything that exists on this planet. Today, we face a critical test: to protect and preserve the environment, and to find ways to overcome the grave crisis that is unfolding," he observed. Stressing the role of education in building a sustainable future,

Encouraging young minds, Shri Dhankhar said, "Be inquisitive-have yearning and desire for new knowledge. The academic pursuit you are engaged in holds immense possibilities-far beyond imagination. In our cultural heritage, wherever you look, you will find a treasure trove."
